

Audible for Schools

What is Audible for Schools?

Continuing its long-time commitment to education, Audible is working with school districts across the country to provide free accounts to eligible students and their teachers to help foster a love of learning and literature.

What's included in the program?

Each account includes unlimited access to a School Collection of 80 titles commonly used in grades 8-12.

Many titles are available with Audible Captions: a feature that allows students to follow narration word for word and even view definitions, Wikipedia entries and translations by simply tapping words.

Additionally, participating students and teachers will be given 12 credits that can be redeemed for any 12 audiobooks from the Audible catalog of over 450,000 titles.

How do students and teachers access the program?

Audible for Schools is available through the Audible app and can be experienced on both iOS and Android devices.

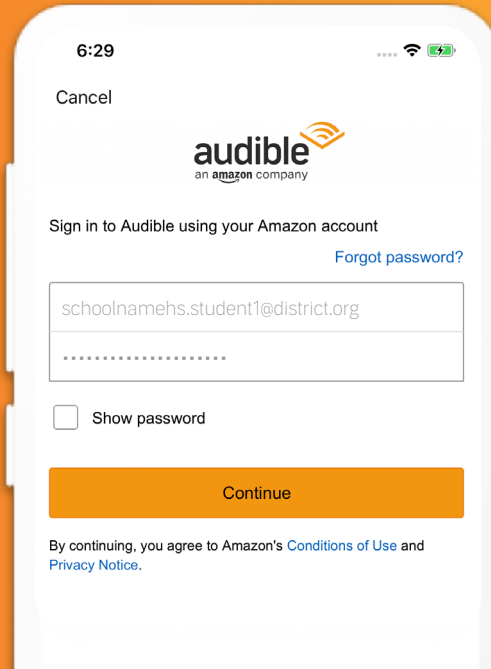

Who is eligible to participate?

Students in grades 8-12 and their teachers in participating districts or schools are eligible. Students must be at least 13 years of age and must return a signed, Parental Consent Form to their teacher or principal.

When will students receive their accounts?

Students will receive their accounts after all Parental Consent Forms have been received by the school or district.

Will there be data to track student progress and success?

Participating districts will receive monthly reports that share student usage data (how many books they are listening to, minutes listened, etc.).

What about privacy?

All usage data from Audible is anonymous. Audible will not know identities associated with any assigned account and will not have access to any personally identifiable student or teacher information.

Will there be tech support?

Audible will provide comprehensive onboarding support to ensure participants know how to take full advantage of their free account. Account holders will also have access to Audible's top-quality customer service.
